oleoresin (which includes paprika and chilli) is manufactured by solvent extraction of the dried Capsicum pods, followed by solvent removal. Typically, one kg of pods yields 90 to 120 g of extract. The pigment concentration in the extract depends mainly on two parameters, the composition of the fruit and the extraction technique employed., The quality parameters of paprika, oleoresin, and dried chilli focus primarily on colour, pungency, and microbial and insect contamination, but vary depending on the product and the intended end-use. 7.5.1
